This Anniversary Recalls Talbot Feild, Jr., Letter on How Tokyo Looked VJ Day

On this fourth anniversary of VJ day Hope Star is reprinting a letter which Lt. Talbot Feilds, Jr. U. S. Navy, of Hope, wrote the newspaper back in 1945 describing Tokyo as he saw it on the day of the surrender.

Mr. Feild's letter, dated September 16, 1945, and published originally in Hope Star October 1, 1945, begins like this:

'After the morning surrender of 2nd September aboard the U. S. S. Missouri my captain took me and nine officers aboard Admiral Nimitz's two Corado scaplanes, which he and his staff flew here in, for a two-hour flight (at low altitude) over the City of Tokyo, Tokyo Bay and the surrounding area. It was a great thrill — a flight I'll always remember.'

'The destruction of Tokyo and Yokohama was unbelievable yet substantial stone buildings were to be seen in a great number. So, naturally, we thought destruction was not complete. But, today, I walked two miles down the main street of Tokyo, in the very heart of the city, and only saw one building — a hotel — that wasn't blasted and gutted. There was a large department store which appeared undamaged and operating on week-days. Yet, as I looked back after walking on, I noticed it was completely burned out from the second story up. Such is the condition of all the Japanese sky-scraper buildings that I saw in what was recently the third largest city in the world.'

'I returned to my ship in Tokyo Bay tonight with the firm conviction that Japan won't need to buy any more scrap iron from the United States. We have provided them with enough to last them for years.'

Farm Bureau Names Officer at Picnic

In high spirits the largest group ever to attend Hempstead County Farm Bureau picnic took part in the Hempstead County Fish-Fry picnic at the Experiment Station yesterday.

A spokesman for the veterans said nine American Legion posts, three Veterans of Foreign Wars groups, and one Catholic war veterans post will be represented.

Vets Vow to Again Picket Robeson

Peekskill, N. Y., Sept. 2 — (UP) — Senator McCarthy (R-Wis.) said today he will insist that Frank Costello of New York, reputed "slot machine king," be called as a witness in the Senate investigation of "five percents."

"I think Costello is a very necessary and important witness," McCarthy told a reporter today.

McCarthy is a member of the Senate investigations subcommittee which has been digging into the question of whether there has been improper influence in letting of the Senate investigation subcommittee.

A scheduled concert by the Negro singer — who has been actively identified with leftist movements — broke up into a fierce riot Saturday after veterans groups staged a counter-demonstration.

Larson, who heads the new government services administration, testified that he, Secretary of Defense Johnson and Budget Director Frank Pace had worked out a plan to make direct contracting easier for small businessmen.

"Unethical firms will be blacklisted and federal employees warned about taking favors, he said, adding:

"It is my honest opinion that this procedure, together with the policy of decentralizing procurement and the maintaining of adequate, courteous and efficient information centers will cause the so-called five per cent to wane and die before the year is out."

Trades Classes Can't Enroll New Trainees

Boston, Mass., Sept. 2 — (UP) — A Jesuit priest and four discharged Boston college instructors indicated they would refuse to send a Vatican order to drop their charges of "heresy" and return immediately to the Catholic church at the "peril of their souls."

As one operator, Walter Keith, expressed it, "the only sure method of discovery has been to drill a hole and see if it (oil) is there."

He explained that oil-bearing formations are scattered and that geology hasn't played a prominent part in determining drilling sites.

"Wildcatters have been proved to be the only really successful method in the Stephens area," he said.

A. Turner, who pioneered development of Gum Creek, Wesson and Smart fields, believes the oil industry here is in its infancy. "We will eventually get deep line oil," he predicted.

Most successful producers have averaged between 1,400 and 4,000 feet. Several favorable showings have been made in deeper tests.

Heavy Nacatoc crude is found around 4,000 feet. Around 4,000 feet, the Travis peak formation is encountered.

The letter, signed by his eminent Cardinal Marchetti-Selvagiani, was published last night in the Pilot, official organ of the Boston archdiocese. It referred to the local Veterans Training program and will be of interest to all Veterans of this area when considering a training class at the school.

"The appropriation act for fiscal 1950, which was passed last night in the House, contains a provision for education and training under title II of the servicemen's readjustments act, as amended, shall be expended subsequent to the effective date of the act or for tuition fee, or other of this act for subsistence allowances for any veteran for a course in an institution which has been in operation for a period of less than one year immediately prior to the date of enrollment in such course, unless such enrollment was prior to the date of the act." The latest ruling will have no effect on the present and on the job classes or on anyone enrolled in these classes. The bill and on-the-job program may still accept new trainees.

The effect on the building trades classes is that no new students may be enrolled at the present time. The building trades classes that are full time training may however, take on some new students and form a new class on or about December 1, 1949.

Rev. Leonard Feeney, S. J., director of St. Benedict center in nearby Cambridge, had been summoned by Archbishop Richard Cushing of Boston, for supporting the teachings of the instructors.

The center, frequented by Harvard and Radcliffe students, have been deprived of the sacraments of the church.

Another development that has spurred drilling is the construction of an 8-inch pipeline from Texas to the east. It will pass within a few miles of Stephens and offer an outlet for production here. The Sun Oil and Sohio Petroleum companies are building the carrier.

Stephens lies in the southwest corner of Ouachita county, between Camden and Magnolia, to the southwest.

The famed Smackover oil field lies to the east and El Dorado to the west.

Discovery of oil has brought a modest boom to Stephens. In 1940, its population was less than 1,000.

Today, there are many more inhabitants. More people means more new business, slump.

cause there will be no need for his services."

The term five percenter has been used to describe those who seek out government contracts for others for a fee — usually five percent. That activity isn't illegal, but the senate group has been searching for signs that it involved "influence peddling."

No sooner had the committee suspended hearings for the present than some members began to look toward the time when the inquiry resumes.

When that time comes, William Helis, oil operator and racing figure, probably will take over the spotlight which centered during the last phase of the investigation on President Truman's military aide, Maj. Gen. Harry H. Vaughan.

McCarthy (R-Wis.) and Margaret Chase Smith (R-Me.) all have demanded a chance to question Helis. His name came up in the hearings repeatedly — usually linked with that of the President's aide.

McCarthy said — and Helis' son denied — that the oil man had an interest in a California race track which got scarce building materials last year after Vaughan had talked to housing officials.

Helis' son, William Helis Jr., who described himself as an old friend of Vaughan, said at a news conference that he and his father had been made victims of "character assassination" by references and innuendos in the Senate probe.

"We cannot further condone or tolerate this baseless attack, and reiterate our desire to be heard," Helis Jr. declared.

He said that it was he and not his father who got in touch with Vaughan about the Tanforan race track in California.

Some of his friends connected with the track called him "in desperation" about their application for a permit to remodel the track, Helis Jr. said, and he suggested that they see Vaughan.

The younger Helis said he called the general and told him there had to be some men in Tanforan who had to be forges and did not know who to see and what to do.

"I told Vaughan they were friends of mine. He said that as a friend he'd be perfectly glad to do what he could."

"They went to see the general, he saw them for two or three minutes and told them where to go," Helis Jr. said his father had helped to organize the Fair Grounds race track, a non-profit civic agency, in his home city, New Orleans, but that except for that his father never had had any interest in a race track.

The younger Helis also asserted that he and his father never had employed John F. Maragon to represent them.

Maragon, former government employee and one-time holder of a White House post, is a central figure in the inquiry.

Hoey has said the senior Helis will be called for testimony sometime in the future, along with two other key witnesses — James V. Hunt, the management counselor whose reported activities touched off the whole inquiry, and David Bennett, president of the Albert Verley Perfume Co.

You're not thinking of marrying anyone else, then?"

"No, I couldn't marry anyone else. Now."

"Then we'll work it out some way," Fritz said. "Together."

That "together" was sufficient. For the present, at least. It sounded so tremendous that it surely could surmount all time, removed all obstacles.

She said, "You darling . . ." and turned her head, so that he would not see the tears that pressed behind her eyelids. She was a sentimental fool. But a happy one. He was so unutterably dear. She was not afraid to be more than that.

"Poor kid," Fritz said, he caught her hands in his. "That was a tough break."

"It was an accident," Gaynel insisted. "But of course people said it wasn't. It was hard to make people believe, especially after they found out that father had turned over his own money in an effort to help save the bank. He was ruined — suicide seemed the

Indiana Man Named Head of Legion

By LEE LINDER

Philadelphia, Sept. 2 — (AP) — The American Legion's new national commander — 40-year-old George N. Craig of Brazil, Ind. — stood pledged today to make that organization "an important voice in the nation's political and social life."

The Hoosier veteran — the first World War Two veteran named to head the Legion — was chosen yesterday in a pin-and-tuck race with three other candidates. The job pays $15,000 annually and carries with it a $35,000 expense allowance.

Philadelphia, Sept. 2 — (AP) — The Arkansas Legislative council today was to begin studying proposals for submission to the 1951 legislature.

The council scheduled a meeting here this morning to consider suggestions for inviting an out-of-state agency to survey Arkansas highways, a constitutional for continuing legislative appropriations, and improvement in legislative records.

Horn Northcutt, Salem, assumed his duties as council director yesterday.

The convention's over — 1950 is next. And in November the Legion's national executive committee will decide where the 32nd convention will be, Los Angeles, Boston and New York are bidding for the site.

Craig rolled into office in thumping majorities given him by a half dozen of the Legion's biggest state departments — Pennsylvania, Illinois, Ohio, Texas, Indiana and New York.

The new leader, serenaded by a hoarse band as he strode to the rostrum, accepted the responsibility of "making the Legion an important voice in the nation's political and social life."

Chinese communists forces were surging into Kwantung province where Canton, the nationalist provisional capital is located.

Li said: "Unless our freedom is protected, our sacrifices during World War II will have been made in vain. The brutal force employed by the communists and their totalitarian ideas far surpass those of the fascists, and their threat to the prosperity of mankind is even more dangerous than that of Hitler, Mussolini and the former Japanese militarists."

In Tokyo, Premier Shigeru Yoshida told the Japanese people they should pay back the money Japan has received from the United States for aid since the war. Only in that way, he indicated, would Japan maintain its old reputation abroad as a nation which never defaulted on its foreign obligations."

Try to make your sessions so interesting that the young people will not want to miss any of them.

Then work up a spirit of sportsmanship. Tell the youngsters that the only way you can make the club a success is for everybody to join in and help boost. I was reading the other day what a Rhodes scholar had to say about English games. He said that nobody seemed to play just to win and that nobody seemed to care whether you played good form or not. The thing was the spirit of sportsmanship, with everybody entering in and doing the best they could.

You can get that idea across to your club, it will make it a success. Many girls and boys hang around in shyness and vanity. They won't try to play for fear they may not win or that they will be laughed at.

You can stop the girl from holding her sweetie's hand by giving her a kiss and letting her know that is one of the things that simply isn't done among sophisticated people. They do their petting in private.

Certainly, it is to laugh to see a girl as you often do, riding around in an automobile with her arm around a boy's neck while he is sitting up stiff as a poker with a look on his face that indicates he would like to strangle her, for well he knows she is making him an object of derision for every observer.

Here's wishing your club success.
